

Takeout & Delivery: The New Norm.

Takeout and delivery are quickly becoming table stakes, and they'll likely remain popular service options among customers. With low-prep, high-quality, fully cooked proteins, Dan's Prize helps strengthen your takeout and delivery programs to make the most of at-home dining.

How Customers are Using Takeout

Family-Style Meals

With more adults working from home and kids in and out of school and daycare, families have more plates to fill on the table. Restaurants can help by offering multi-entrée packages or larger portions to feed more mouths and make meal planning a little easier.

Make-At-Home Kits

Whether customers are unable to visit a restaurant or they simply want to experience the joy of assembling their favorite menu item, many have been taking advantage of restaurants' make-at-home meal kits. With a set of instructions and an assortment of ingredients, stay-at-home diners can play chef while creating a dish virtually from scratch.

To-Go Tips

- Use menu items that travel and heat up well
- Outline reheating instructions
- Create specials for families, like "Dinner for Four"
- Make sure to include extra utensils, napkins and condiments
- Add an appreciation item (gift card, thank-you note, etc.)
- Include extra sauces and dressings
- Include a list of future specials
- Create a simple frequent-diner program
- Offer a freebie with orders over a certain amount

Proteins That Travel Especially Well.

Here are a few dine-in favorites that are also ideal for delivery, to-go and curbside programs.

SLICED MEATS

Our sliced meats are perfectly cooked sous vide style and sliced for your convenience and portion control. Each variety presents beautifully in sandwiches, wraps, salads and more.

Insight: Sandwiches travel extremely well. With the right (non-soggy) ingredients, they're a popular, fail-safe option for operators building their off-premise program.
